World Trade Balance

The trade balance is a measure of the difference between a country's exports and imports of goods and services, with a surplus indicating that a nation exports more than it imports and a deficit signifying the opposite, both of which have significant economic implications.

As you can see, the trade balance most of our chosen countries is in between
55.5 billion dollars. (SEE MAIN CONTENT)
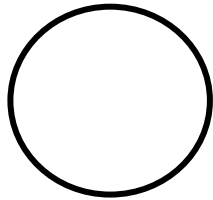

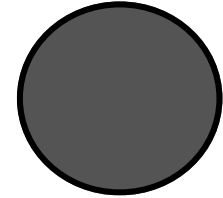

Main Content / DATA:

Conclusion:

We can infer from the data that the histogram is positively skewed, meaning most of the countries has a good trade balance.
